

Exploring the Proposed Mechanism Behind Delusions and Hallucinations in Dementia-Related Psychosis

This video will provide general information regarding dementia-related hallucinations and delusions and will discuss a proposed neural pathway that may be associated with them. Additionally, the unmet need for the treatment of dementia-related hallucinations and delusions will be discussed, with a particular focus on the risk/benefit ratio of current atypical antipsychotics.

DATE

Wednesday, January 20, 2021

TIME

10:00 -10:30 AM CT

LOCATION

Click Here to Register

Actor portrayal

FACULTY

Stephen Brunton, MD, FAAFP

Executive Director, Primary Care Metabolic Group
Los Angeles, California

Stephen M. Stahl, MD, PhD, DSc (Hon)

Editor in Chief, CNS Spectrums
Clinical Professor, University of California, Riverside
Adjunct Professor, University of California, San Diego
Honorary Visiting Senior Fellow, University of Cambridge